Description

Pamilacan is an island in the Bohol Sea (also called Mindanao Sea), situated 12.5 kilometres (7.8 mi) south of Bohol island. It has a population of 1,422, comprising about 240 families.

To the northeast of the island is a 200-year-old Spanish fort, which in the past served as a watchtower for the Spaniards to look out for intruders, such as pirates and other enemies, particularly those coming from the south.

Aside from being famous for whale shark and dolphin-watching activities, the island is also known for its white sand beaches and renowned for its snorkelling and dive sites.
